By requiring observations every hour, it produces a more dynamic estimate that better reflects changes in rainfall, humidity and sun. The prognosis and / or the observed time (for retrospective periods) of the selected meteorological stations are used to estimate the scheduled adjustments to dead fuel humidity for those analyzes. When writing this article in 2019, the initial moistures of dead fuel in deterministic analyzes are based on estimates using the dead fuel moisture model of FOSBERG while the conditioning climate uses the Nelson model to adjust the humidity of 1H, 10h, 1h, 10h and 100h. Contents for 1 to several days . In most cases, one or two days of conditioning is sufficient. Be careful to review the climatic inputs of the conditioning both for the days observed and for prognosis. a. the Number of rainfall, the high moisture recovery during the night and / or significant coverage of clouds can significantly increase the humidity of fine fuel. The desktop software (Flammap and Farsite) can use any initial fuel moisture and meteorological flow that the user supplies to apply these conditioning settings.WFDSS F5Pro extracts its dead fuel wetting (1-HR, 10-HR and 100-HR ) in the ERC table of the WIMS implementation of NFDRS. Classifies and groups the ERC (C) values of the climatology of the selected meteorological station and provides means of moisture fuel from the underlying data for each of those groups, or percentile classes. When writing this article in 2019, it uses 78 Fuel Model G and the FOSBERG model for all the default moisture moisture values of the dead fuel.
